These figures, however, are subjected by Mr. McKean, the Statistical Secretary to a process of correction. The values given in the statistics being calculated on the prices in the markets of the ports at which the articles respectively enter or quit China, Mr. McKean considers it necessary to deduct the duty and charges from the value of imports and to add the duty and charges to the value of the exports, by which the true value of the goods in the ship's hold is arrived at. On this showing to 11 a.m. service at St. Peter's (Seamen's) we find that the imports cost Tls. 109,547,087 and the exports yielded Tls. 100,199,682,

As regards silk the causes for the decline may, we hope, be looked upon as temporary. The yield was below the average, the rise in the value of silver had a tendency to check sales, and the demand in Europe and America was less brisk than usual. In the case of tea, unfortunately, there is less likelihood of a recovery. Nothing can save the trade but the abolition of the export duty and lekin, and this is a pacrifice the Government do not seem disposed to make. The consequence is that while the world's consumption of tea is steadily increasing the export of the article from China is steadily falling off. The will speedily flock to the East Coast also. THE ENGINES OF SHIPS AND OF MEN. - In the month of March, the great and beautiful steamship City of Paris, while on her voyage from New York to Liverpool, met with an accident by which her engines were completely disabled, leaving her helpless on the sea, She carried a large number of passengers, and great anxlety was felt concerning her in Europa and America. How she was finally towed into Queenstown Harbour will be remembered by the public. "Well, what of it?" you say. "They afterwards found out how it happened, and repaired the engines, and no lives were lost." Very true, but wait a moment. Because you never go to sea, do you think the sudden struction of a ship's engine has no lesson for you? How shortsighted men are! Did you ever lie on your bed at home, or on a cot in a hospital, helpless as a log! What ailed you! Some disease. What is disease? "It is an accident to your vital machinery. What do the doctors try to do for you? To "oure" you. Yes, of course. Suppose we say "repair" you; it comes to the same thing; for we are kept alive and going by certain organs or engines inside the body. When they are out of order and work hadly we are ill; when they stop, we die. Do you see the force of the illustration? Sometimes a man's machinery is never right from the hour of his birth. Here is a short story one man tells about himself which will show what we mean. He says: "One ship is never weak because another is, but a baby may be weak because its parents were, or some other of its ancestors. It is spoken of in the family that when I was an infant, I did nothing but sleep. Now, a healthy infant ought to sleep most of the time, but not all the time. He should laugh, play, cry, kick; and take notice of things. My mother was bothered about it, and saw the doctor, who said it was owing to the sluggish state of my liver. Nevertholess, I lived and graw up as millions of children do. But inherited disease makes its mark sooner or later, according to circumstances. "About five years ago I began to feel bad. I SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL ...... felt languid and tired, and had no ambition for work. My appetite failed, and when I did eat, under a cort of compulsion. I had great pain Hon. J. J. MICHAELSEN, Esq. time. But I came out still weak, and a little J. S. MOSES, Esq. later on I was so had I broke down completely, G. E. NOBLE, Esq. and took to my bed. Matters now looked very POON PONG, Esq. serious for me. "The first doctor who came to see me was not able to give any relief, and my people felched I got worse, and was in great agony. I had pains all over me, but more particularly in the were stopped or constipated, and the doctor seemed puzzled. One day he said, 'I cannot account for your condition.' I now began to think what was best to be done. Yet what could I do? "I had heard of a medicine called Mother Seigel's Corative Syrup, which was said to be most remarkable ours for deep-seated and chronic complaints where all other remedies were unavailing, but I had never tried it, and why should I believe in it? Yet how strangely we are sometimes led into paths we have never travelled before! "About this time I picked up a newspaper, and read of a case similar to my own that had b en cured-so the writer said by Mother Seigel's Syrup. I decided to risk it, and sont over to Mr. Dyer, the chemist, in Acre Lane. West Brixton, and got a bottle, and in ten minutes after taking the first dose I felt relief "In my excitement and satisfaction I declared, This is the right thing? "After taking six bottles I found myself in perfect health. I am a new man. I never was in better health in my life, and all the members of my family think of my cure as all the more H. Hoppins, Esq. wonderful owing to my having suffered with liver complaint from my infancy. I will gladly answer any inquiries about Mother Seigel's Syrup, and what it did for me." (Signed) W. Goldspink, 126, Acre Lane, Brixton, and 19, Tachbrook Street, Pimlico. Mr. Goldspink is a pork butcher, and is well known and highly respected. In addition to his inherited weakness of the liver he suffered from deep-seated indigestion and dyspepsia, with an acute attack of constinution, a dangerous and often fatal complication. For this almost universal malady-often mistaken for other diseases—Seigel's Syrup is the only remedy to be relied upon. [Now First Published.] CHAPTER XIX. RISEN FROM THE DEAD.

Lady Engismore returned to her house Grosvenor Place, quite unconscions that she had attracted any notice except that which she ordinarily received. She had some tea, and then went up to the nursery to see her boy, and found his father there before her. Lord Enniamore anderd absolutely worshipped this beautiful child, who was the pride and darling of his heart. and the heir to his old name.

Ennismore would say with a smile, but she also watched over his welfare with uncersing care. The husband and wife were to dine at a Cabinet Minister's in the evening, and remain to a recention afterwards, therefore presently Lady Ennismore went to dress, promising as she did so that the children should see her before she left, as she tuste, and looked wonderfully handsome with father's large property. arms, and gleaming in her beir.

she also reflected. Miss Sinclair's great hope in life indeed was ingly happy lot she always felt envious. "She has everything," she often thought bit-terly: "it is not fair."

Then the women who had "everything' stooped down and kissed her handsome boy and her two girls, and went away in her well appointed carriage, with the husband who thought she had no equal on earth, and whom he most traly loved. She went to be admired and courted, filling her position with the gracious, graciful ease which was one of her many charms. Men who rarely cared to talk to ordinary women always gathered round Lady Equismore. She never tried to attract attention, but accepted homage as if it were her right, and gave in return her rare gift of true sweet sympathy; and genuine appreciation of the good qualities of those around ber. It was late before she returned home, and the next morning she felt a little weary, and had her breakfast before she rose; her maid bringing up several letters on a salver, which had arrived by the early post, while she was drinking her tea. She glanced at them carelessly, and left them lying unopened until she had finished breakfast. Then she began leisurely to look over their contents. They were mostly invitations; invitations to the houses of the great and famous, for Ludy Ennismore was universally popular and much sought after in society. At last she raised one written on more common paper than the rest. and was about to leave it unbpened, as she thought it was merely some circular, when some thing in the peculiarity of the hand writing at-
